

Bouncebackability – the mitigation simulation from HQN

The sequel to Iron Grip – Iron Grip covered the stresses – Bouncebackability tests out how you can pull back from the brink – it's what you need for a more challenging world.

The RSH says that associations are making good headway on stress testing but aren't so hot at coming up with mitigations that steer away from danger.

Bouncebackability helps you plug that gap in a fun and safe way. It's great for your board's away day.

Bouncebackability – what's new?

- Updated stresses
- Stronger focus on what you do and how you behave in a crisis – identifying the right levers to pull at the right time
- Emphasis on managing reputations not just finances
- Considers the unintended consequences of taking remedial action - ability to test out the pinch points on the V1/V2 line
- Assessing what and when to talk to the RSH – key issue under the de-regulation deal.

Bouncebackability – what happens on the day?

- Short introduction on stress testing today
- Explanation of rules
- Group discussions on scenarios
- Assess the impact of mitigations you suggest
- Setting recovery plans for what you need to do in real life.

Bouncebackability – who runs the sessions?

Alistair McIntosh, HQN's Chief Executive and Ian Parker, our finance expert will run the sessions and tailor them for you.
