The press is full of stories about organisations not having sufficient fire risk assessments. Some don't even know whether the assessments they do have are even suitable. Are you one of them?

This comprehensive three-day training programme will give you the knowledge and confidence to undertake an assessment of your own and audit your completed contractor's assessments.

Developed with industry professionals, we've tailored this course specifically for high- and low-rise flat blocks in England and Wales so you can be assured that the content is relevant to you.

What's more, the course has been accredited by The Institute of Fire Safety Managers (IFSM).

This is the definitive guide to carrying out and understanding fire risk assessments.

But don't just take our word for it, have a look at what some of our previous delegates had to say...

"Easy to understand, enjoyable and thoroughly developed my knowledge of fire safety. I learned the correct way in which to carry out an inspection and look at every tiny detail"
Stuart Adkins, Surveyor, WM Housing Group

"I am now fully confident to carry out fire risk assessments in my workplace as a result of this excellent training course"

David Mulcahy, Health and Safety Advisor, Riverside Group

"I can highly recommend this course to anyone who has been tasked with carrying out fire risk assessments by their organisation. You feel empowered after completing the course"

Martin Omoko, Surveyor, Croydon Churches Housing Association

Expert guidance

Our trainer, Bob Evans, has over 30 years' experience in the Fire Service and 16 years as a fire safety consultant.

With both the knowledge and the practical experience, Bob is well equipped to lead you through the three days.

Who should attend?

If you work in health and safety, asset management or are looking for an opportunity to develop your skills, this is for you.

You'll put your training into practice in the practical assessment on the final day so you can be confident that you're able to carry out assessments to a high standard.
