

Fire risk assessment for general needs, sheltered and extra care accommodation (three-day course delivered in-house)

Every housing provider should have someone who fully understands and can identify the hazards and risks from fire. This course, designed specifically for the social housing sector, will equip delegates with the information and knowledge needed to support them in carrying out fire risk assessments in specific types of properties (flat blocks, sheltered and extra care).

It will look at the relevant and specific risks to these types of properties, including evacuation of disabled people, types of alarm systems, and will encourage delegates to put into practice what they have learned by undertaking a practical assessment on the third day of the course.

Our trainer:

Bob Evans, fire safety specialist, will deliver this three-day course. With 32 years' experience in the fire service and over 19 years as a fire safety consultant, most of which have been providing support in the social housing sector, Bob has both the knowledge and the practical experience.

Who should attend:

If you work in health and safety, asset management or are looking for an opportunity to develop your skills, this is for you.

You'll put your training into practice in the practical assessment on the final day so you can understand what to look for when carrying out an assessment.
